Cakes, 'Smokes' to Be Given Troops Easter

American Legion Is Conducting Local Drive for Soldiers

Hempstead county soldiers at Camp Robinson will have good things for Easter. Such is the aim of the Leslie Huddleston Post of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary.

When Company A, 133rd Infantry, was tendered a parting meeting by the ex-soldiers of World War I, it was stated that the Hempstead County soldier boys at Camp Robinson would not be forgotten by the people of Hempstead County; and the presents this Easter are to be tangible proof of that statement.

200 Boxes of Food
The women of the American Legion Auxiliary are planning to send to Camp Robinson Easter Sunday morning, one-hundred home made cakes and also two hundred boxes, each containing home made cookies and candies. This will give cakes for our soldiers in Camp Robinson, and also an Easter box of cookies and candies for each Hempstead County boy in Camp Robinson.

In addition to the "sweets" the Legion members are going to send "smokes" to the extent of several packages of cigarettes for each Hempstead County boy.

Mrs. M. M. McClaughan for the American Legion Auxiliary has said: "We want every lady and girl in Hempstead county to have a part in sending cake, cookies, and candies to our soldiers in Camp Robinson. We hope all persons who desire to give will call some member of the Auxiliary Committee immediately and state what may be expected; and then bring the 'sweets' to the Hope Furniture Company not later than 9:00 a. m. Saturday, April 12, so we may arrange the individual packages. We can not send too much, for soldier boys love 'sweets'."

The Committee
Mrs. McClaughan gave the name and phone number of the members of her committee as follows:

Mrs. M. M. McClaughan, phone 587-W.
Mrs. E. S. Franklin, phone 860.
Mrs. Malcolm Porterfield, phone 688.
Mrs. H. O. Kyler, phone 458.
Mrs. W. T. Smith, phone 43-J.
Mrs. Calvin Cassidy, phone 146.
Linus Walker, chairman of the "smokes" committee for the American Legion, said:

"We know by experience that soldier boys love 'smokes.' We want every Hempstead county boy to know his home people are thinking of him. Here is the way for us to do it. Let each and every interested person give $1 for 'smokes' for our boys."

The Legion committee to get the "smokes" money is as follows:
Cecil Weaver, Ched Hall, Robert Wilson, W. T. Smith, Ben Edmonston, H. O. Kyler, Judge Fred Luck.

Super-Market for A. & P. on South Main

R. D. Franklin Putting Up Big Grocery, New Apartment House

Construction of Hope's first super-market, to be occupied by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., and the building of a four-family apartment house, were announced for South Main street Monday by R. D. Franklin, well known local business man.

Both the super-market and the apartment house will be located on the former Bill Briant property, taking the business district south of First Baptist church on Main street.

The Briant property acquired by Mr. Franklin has a frontage of 150 feet on Main street. The A. & P. market will occupy the south 90 feet of this frontage, and the apartment house the north 60 feet, with a driveway between them.

Provision for parking
The A. & P. "Super Style Market," as the company designates this type of operation, will be 50 feet wide and 150 feet deep, with parking across the front of the building and down the entire south side, made possible by an alley which bounds the south side. Demand for increased parking space has caused A. & P. to leave the central business district in other cities, but this is the first such move in Hope.

The new A. & P. building will be of solid brick, with concrete floors covered by asphalt tile, and with a cellophane ceiling. An air-cooling system will be installed.

A. & P. has leased the new structure for 10 years.

Contract on both the grocery and the apartment house have been let by Mr. Franklin to John Booth, Hope contractor, and work will begin the latter part of this week. All present buildings on the property will be torn down, Mr. Franklin said.

Ready August 1

A. & P. is to occupy the new super-market by August 1, but the apartment house will be completed earlier, possibly by July 15, Mr. Franklin said.

The apartment house will be of frame construction, with a clapped exterior, and strictly modern throughout. There will be four five-room apartments, two upstairs and two down. They will efficiently-type apartments, with hardwood floors and built-in fixtures, Mr. Franklin said.

Circuit Court Begins Hearing Judge Contest

Luck's Motion to Continue Case Denied by Circuit Judge Bush

A motion to continue the Hempstead county judge election contest between Fred A. Luck, incumbent, and John L. Wilson, contestant, for 30 days was denied by Judge Dexter Bush of Texarkana in circuit court which convened here Monday.

The motion for continuance was filed by Luck's attorneys, John P. Vesey and W. S. Atkins, on the ground that Attorney Atkins was physically unable to try the case at this time and that an attempt to try it might prove dangerous to his health.

In denying the motion Judge Bush also set the criminal and civil cases, originally scheduled for this court session, for the second Monday in May, clearing the way for the contest trial at this session.

Former Circuit Clerk Ralph Bailey testified that 203 ballots questioned during the first hearing of the case had been in his custody and had been under lock and key at the Citizens National bank since the case was dismissed last fall. The ballots were turned over to present Circuit Clerk J. P. Byers.

The court was then adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

On January 6 the Arkansas Supreme Court held that the Hempstead Circuit court erred in dismissing the case because of omission of names from the printed list of voters and ordered a new trial.

The first count of votes in the primary election gave Wilson a 3-vote lead. A recount of the ballots in one township gave Luck a nine-vote lead. Luck was then declared the official nominee by the County Democratic Central Committee.

Any changes in wage and working conditions agreed upon during the time shall be made retroactive to April 1, original expiration date of the contract.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Defense Mediation Board announced Sunday an agreement for settlement of the Allis-Chalmers strike had been signed by the company and by union officials subject to ratification by their membership. Agreement on the case, largest defense strike referred to the board, was reached after 19 hours of discussion behind locked doors.

Phelps-Dodge Strike
ELIZABETH, N. J. —(AP)— Members of Local 411, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.) Sunday authorized a midnight work stoppage at the busy Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Corporation Bayway plant. It was the second stoppage in 10 weeks.

The plant employs about 1,500 men. President Wylie Brown recently estimated the company's defense contracts and subcontracts at $30,000,000.

Delegates to a meeting of the local approved a "work stoppage" resolution after Peter Besch, the union's international representative, said a formal strike could not be called until permission had been obtained from the international's headquarters.

Bee Shortstop Has Good Luck

Contributes Career to Just 'Blind Luck'

By FELIX E. MCKNIGHT
AP Feature Service
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Blind luck, a factor of many careers, has been a factor in the career of Eddie Miller, shortstop of the New York Yankees. Eddie Miller is the name. He is a big, bull-shouldered, Eddie Miller, who is a great fielding shortstop who can hit and hard.

The story of Eddie Miller starts some 10 years ago. Out in the back of his house near the Pittsburgh ball park—no close I could just roll out of bed into left field—a square-faced, handsome little fellow banged a ball against the side of the house. He dived to his left and right to catch the rebounds.

Out in a vacant lot he learned how to run the bases. Eddie tried hook and belly slides into his "bases"—large stones laid in the grass. Through high school Eddie played baseball and finally a Pittsburgh scout saw him.

Off to Springfield

He was sent down to Springfield, Ohio, with a couple of kid pitchers for a shot at Class C ball. The manager looked over his trio and decided to let them hang around a couple of days and then ship them home.

On the second day the locals were playing a spring exhibition game. Eddie and his two doomed pitchers were in a peep game far out on the left field baseline when the game wore into the ninth inning.

The manager waved Eddie in to pinch hit. Eddie picked out the biggest bat he could find and walked to the plate. The first two pitchers were steamed on the outside corner.

"I missed 'em both a mile," Eddie confessed. "I was ready to take my cut at the third, miss it and pack up for the trip home. The third pitcher came ripping down the middle and I swung with everything I had. I connected. The ball cleared the center field fence for a home run."

"I stayed with Springfield that season. But do you know something? I never hit another home run down there."

Eddie's blind luck—and he says it was genuinely blind for he "might" have had his eyes closed on that circuit blow—started his bright career.

In 1935 he was sent to Toronto, but finished the year in the Piedmont league. He stuck it out with Toronto in 1936 and became a Cincinnati chameleon in 1937, playing at Syracuse. The Reds traded him to Newark, Yankee farm, for Willard Hershberger.

The Yankees sent Eddie down to Kansas City in '38. He was fast rounding into true form there, but the Yankees sold him to the Boston Bees.

Starts in '39

So Eddie started his big league career in '39 with Boston. He was going great guns until one day he charged out into center field for a high fly, collided with Al Simmons and broke his leg. For months he nursed the leg along—was able to start the '40 season with the Bees.

Last season Eddie Miller was great, even with his feeble leg. He hit .276, but he drove in 79 runs and lashed out 13 home runs.

In the first spring game with the

They Ought to Understand 'Protective Custody'

St. Louis Browns he tapped three Brownie hurlers for a home run. Two doubles and single. "Casey Stengel taught me a lot about this game," Eddie muses. "He taught me to hold the bat on the end and take a cut. He taught me baseball was just a game instead of work. He has made fielding 100 ground balls easy, whereas I used to labor at stabbing 25 of them."

To Eddie Miller, whom Casey Stengel describes "as just about the best shortstop in either league," his biggest walkout out of baseball came last season.

"We were playing the Giants in the Polo Grounds, Carl Hubbell was pitching. I got hold of a sinker and cut it out for two bases to score Chet Ross and win that game, 2-1. "Why was it so important to me?"

"When I was a kid in high school we had a professor who sneaked in a little baseball conversation during our classwork. He would tell us for hours about Hubbell's great screw ball."

"I would sit there and dream about some day batting against the great Hubbell."

"Well—I did!"

Cold Frame Gives Tender Crops Month's Start With No Expense for Heat

The Cold Frame Story—How to Build and Use It.

There is quite a bit of wood-work connected with gardening, and winter is a good time to be at it. A major task is building a cold-frame, which is well called the amateur gardener's best friend.

In those tantalizing weeks of early spring, when a warm sun one day sets the garden fever burning, and freezing weather that night chills with the courage, a cold frame is priceless.

Everybody needs one, though he may have a hotbed, or even a greenhouse in addition. To the great majority of home gardeners, the cold frame will suffice for all real needs in early sowing.

Easy to build, and simple to operate, it enables seeds to be sown several weeks before it would be safe to sow them in the open. With the protection of the glass sash on frosty nights the seeds will germinate, and the seedlings grow sturdily, until they are large enough to transplant into the open ground.

To make a cold frame, the accompanying illustrations give full and detailed instructions. The soil which is used in it should be fine, friable top soil, well pulverized. Sow the seed as you would in a flat, or hotbed, water thoroughly and firm the soil over the seed, pressing smooth with a brick, or piece of board.

Watering now becomes of great importance. At no time should the soil be allowed to become hard and dry. Yet excessive watering may cause the seeds to rot, sour the soil, or cause "damping off." When the plants appear, thin them out, allowing each to grow singly without crowding.

After the seedlings appear, watering is still important. Good drinks, between which the soil dries somewhat without becoming crusty and hard, should be the next great need. On sunny days, the sash should be lifted early in the morning, otherwise the temperature may quickly run to a dangerous height. Inspect the cold frame at least every morning and afternoon, and remember it whenever the weather changes abruptly.

When the program needed to keep the young plants growing vigorously, which means with good heavy roots and strong stems, stocky rather than tall and spindling.

When transplanting time comes, take up the seedlings with little disturbance of the roots as possible, and get them back into the ground as soon as you can.

Advertising Suit Is Heard

Witmer Upheld in 3 Accounts, Suspended on Others

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)—The supreme court Monday authorized Wallace Witmer, former manager of Arkansas Dailies, Inc., to operate under present contracts with three Arkansas Daily newspapers but restrained him from soliciting advertising contracts from clients of Arkansas Dailies pending final decision on litigation between Witmer and the agency.

The high tribunal agreed to advance for submission four weeks from today an appeal by Witmer from a Ponce chancey court ruling restraining him from soliciting clients of Arkansas Dailies.

The court made its ruling Monday following a hearing on a petition by Witmer for a writ of supersedeas to stay injunction proceedings pending final court decision.

The three newspapers with which Witmer was allowed to continue contracts were: Jonesboro Tribune-Batesville Guard and Wynne Star-Progress.

Chancellor J. M. Shinn held at Harrison last February that Witmer, after resigning as manager of Arkansas Dailies in October 1939, wrongfully attempted to obtain contracts which the agency had obtained

Hugh Wilson Adds Second Volume to Important Memoirs

Hugh Wilson, veteran of 30 years in the American diplomatic service, presents his second volume of memoirs of that experience in "Diplomat Between Wars" (Longmans: $3). Crowded with entertaining incidents and vignettes of world figures, this volume gives a ringside picture of the disintegration of Europe from the World War to the eve of the present one. Because his latest diplomatic post was that of Ambassador to Germany, Wilson's estimate of the German people is especially significant today. He writes:

"I have seen the Germans in war and triumph, I have seen the Germans in defeat and humiliation, I have seen the Germans in the pride of the Third Reich, and the same characteristic has always been evident. They deviate more from the normal than the other races of western Europe. Their enthusiasm in the pursuit of the abnormal knows no bounds. I have seen them the world's most pacifist nation, I have seen them the world's most bellicose."

The German people are sincere in through his services.

The chancellor cancelled contracts which Witmer had made with the Fayetteville Democrat publishing company and Harrison Daily Times, and enjoined Witmer from fulfilling contracts he made with other former clients of the agency.

these faiths. There is a restlessness, a necessity for faith that the older races cannot comprehend. There is a violence in the expression thereof that to the older races often appears the ludicrous, but this manifold possibility in the character of the German race must be recognized abroad. It is the essential factor, it seems to me, in dealing with these people.

It is absurd, I submit, to attempt to distinguish between Nazis and Germans. . . . This volatile and highly spiritual people are capable of the sublime in sacrifice and of incredible limits of ruthlessness. Somehow the means must be found to bring out among them those characteristics which will make them good neighbors among the peoples of the world.

'Tobaccoland' Offered Again

History of Tobacco Industry Available to Public

Heading the advertisements in Chesterfield's latest campaign, released nationally this week to newspapers by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, is a new offer of the free book, "Tobaccoland, U. S. A."

This book, a large, complete illustrated story of the tobacco industry, has proved so popular with American readers that a second million copies were recently published and are rapidly being distributed. Free copies may be obtained upon request to Chesterfield, P. O. Box No. 21, New York City.

Veronica Lake and William Holden of the coming picture, "I Wanted Wings," and Carole Landis of the current comedy, "Topper Returns," head the "parade of stars" in this newest Chesterfield series. A special advertisement, to be released when the baseball season opens, features Frank McCormick, star first baseman of the world champion Cincinnati Reds. Other advertisements feature Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier of the new picture, "That Hamilton Woman," and Priscilla Lane of the new release, "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America."

A new campaign theme, "It's Chesterfield... for a cooler, milder, better smoke," carries throughout the new series and in national billboard showings and dealers' displays and on the radio. Fred Waring's "Pleasure Time" continues for Chesterfield every evening from Monday through Friday over N. B. C. stations, while Glen Miller's "Moonlight Serenade" every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening over the Columbia Broadcasting System is renewed for a new series.

Calling All Einsteins and Infant Prodigies to Explain Billion-Dollar Farm Aid Bill

WASHINGTON—It will be interesting to see if the house approves or vetoes the $1,340,000,000 farm bill which the senate has just cooked up. It's the largest farm bill in history, of course.

The back-ground, you'll remember, was this:
In mid-March, farm leaders went to the President with a plea for greater farm aid in the way of increased "parity payments."

When the President disapproved, house farm leaders passed the bill for the next fiscal year with a total appropriation of $800,000,000.

This senate proposal proceeded to up by a mere $500,000,000.

Farm aid, as now on the books, consists of several things:
1. Payments for soil conserving: letting ground lie fallow or planting it in crops which will restore its productivity, but definitely not planting it in wheat, cotton or corn.
2. Crop loans: giving farmers money on their crops of wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco, then storing the surplus because no one has figured what else to do with it.

3. Purchase of surplus: acquisition of unmarketable foods which are disposed of through the Surplus Commodities Corporation stamp plan.

4. Parity payments.
This Gets Complicated
Crux of the whole business is the item of parity payments, and to say that it would take a Moscow lawyer, two agents of the Gestapo and Albert Einstein to get to the bottom of this one puts it mildly.

A parity payment, in case you have forgotten and wish to paste the information in your hat, is "the price which will give to the commodity a purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy, equivalent to the purchasing power of such commodities in the base period," which is August, 1909, to July, 1914.

This is what will keep the Moscow lawyer busy for a time, and Einstein will come in on the formula for computing a parity price:

Parity price equals B times I, divided by 100, in which "B" is the base price of the commodity in the halcyon days of 1909-1914, and "I" is the index number of prices paid by farmers for the things farmers buy, including interest on debts, their taxes and freight rates. Department of Agriculture economists figure out this index number. Please Do Not Disturb.
Putting the two agents of the Gestapo to work and trying to find the whys, wherefores and merits, if any, for all this, the need for parity payments is based on points like these:

In 1909-14, the price of a five-foot mowing machine was around $47. In 1940 it was around $97. That is illustrative of the way prices have advanced on the things farmers buy, but it is offset to a degree by the

SERIAL STORY

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

BY EDITH ELLINGTON

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: The dance hall is a new thrill for Bee. She is so much in love with Anthony, and she knows he loves her. Sam and Toby seem to have settled their difficulties, too. En route home, on the subway, Bee sees a handsome stranger. HEIRSS BELIEVED KIDNAPED!

MASQUERADE MUST END CHAPTER XXIV

KIDNAPED! The paper said that Beatrice Davenport had been kidnapped. It was incredible, fantastic, so ridiculous that Beatrice wanted to scream.

She wasn't kidnapped. How in the world had that story gotten started? Her head hummed.

She was supposed to be in South America. Of course, she'd never so much as booked passage on a liner. But even if someone, somehow, had run across that damaging fact—did that make her kidnapped?

Then, like a blow, she remembered. Clarence was the one who thought of kidnappings!

Oh, the fool, the blundering idiot! This story must have come from him. She'd disappeared—he couldn't find her—Weeming said she'd gone to South America and Clarence, shocked because their marriage was only a week away, must have tried to find out where in South America...

The thoughts flitted through her head so swiftly that only now was the train stopping at the station. The doors opened. She looked at Toby, her head bent to take in more of that tabloid story. "Come on, Toby!" Sam pulled at her.

"Oh, quick, buy me a paper! The Duchess has been kidnapped. Hallelujah!" Stiffly, Beatrice walked out of the train beside Anthony. Toby had seen that picture. Didn't she recognize it?

Now they were on the platform. Anthony was looking straight ahead, his jaw a hard line, a little bunch of muscles twitching at the corner of his mouth. Beatrice felt her insides growing cold—dissolving with a little horrid sensation that was like nausea. "Anthony?"

He didn't answer.

mouth was dry. She wanted to ask him and couldn't.

On the stairs to the street she stumbled. Anthony caught her. His smile was tender.

No! He didn't know. He couldn't! Not and smile like that. Dimly, as from a long way off, Toby's voice came to her. "They must be holding her for ransom. Boy! Wait until this news hits the store! The girls will be dancing in the aisles! They'll run up a flag on that roof where they were too tight to fix a sun deck for us worn-out, overworked slaves!"

"Imagine it," Vera murmured. "You'd think, with all her millions, she'd have sense enough to have a bodyguard."

"The paper didn't say positively she's been kidnapped," Sam pointed out. "It said 'believed' kidnapped."

"I hate that dame!" That was Toby's voice. "Ever since that $50,000 debut I've hated her. We slave in the store, while she runs around spending millions. But she's not having any wonderful time now, I hope. I hope they're keeping her in a cave. A nice damp cave some place where she can find out what it feels like to do without—"

"Toby! Stop gloating! It's ghastly!" That was Vera, tolerant as always, and a little amused.

They were on the sidewalk. The corner candy store was closed. The drug store was closed. "No boys with extras. It's a disgrace! I want a paper right now."

BEATRICE walked beside Anthony, the blood hammering at her temples, her knees weak. Couldn't they see on her face what this meant to her? If only they'd look at her, get it over with!

"I think it's barbarous," Sam McArdle said. "Kidnaping a girl! Men who would do that should be executed. Why, it's—it's—" "All right, kidnaping is terrible," Toby admitted. "But, Sam, this is the Duchess. You work for her as well as we do. Doesn't she deserve it?"

"She's the kind who'll fall in love with one of the gangsters," Terry said. "Wouldn't that be a laugh? Anything for a thrill, with those girls!"

"I hope she gets a good, hard jolt. I hope every one of the gangsters holding her looks like a guerrilla, I hope—"

Beatrice found her voice. "Toby, why do you hate her so?" To her own ears, she sounded shrill and brittle. But she couldn't stop. "What has she ever done to you, besides having been born the granddaughter of Michael Huntington?"

"What has she ever done for me?" retorted Toby. "A girl who has the power of life or death over so many thousand employees might take an interest once in a while! Just because she is a girl, she ought to make things easier for all the girls who work for her. The millions of little petty cheapnesses that Huntington's gets away with! Like not giving Getz a pension."

"Why, if I owned Huntington's I'd make it a model store. If I got millions out of it, the way she does, I'd be generous enough to share some of it with the poor, unlucky dopes who have to work there."

"Do you know, some firms divide part of the profits at Christmas. Everybody gets a bonus, according to how long they've been there. What do we get at Huntington's? A lot of extra work!"

They had reached their apartment house. Sam McArdle said, soothingly, "No place to get a paper, Toby. Forget it. They'll probably find her visiting a friend somewhere. I suppose her guardian got excited when he learned she wasn't home..."

Anthony looked startled. "That's right. Her guardian. You handle a lot of stuff about her in the comptroller's office, don't you?" It struck Beatrice then that Anthony hadn't said much up to now. What did he look so startled about?

SHE fought for self-control. She must act perfectly natural. Without a paper, tonight was a reprieve. In the morning, when they looked at that picture in the tabloid more closely—and the other pictures later editions would surely contain—

At the door, the men said good night. Anthony drew her a little away from the others and pulled her into his arms. With his arms around her, Beatrice faced the bleak knowledge that tomorrow it would be over. Tomorrow he might hate her.

She wanted to push at him, to say, "Listen, Anthony. Beatrice Davenport hasn't been kidnapped. I'm Beatrice Davenport."

But she wanted to put off telling him, too. "I love him so much. It will hurt him so terribly..."

"Darling," said Anthony. "You're shaking."

"What's a girl supposed to do in your arms, Anthony?" she forced herself to say, lightly. She freed herself, smiled at him.

"Good night," she added, with a catch in her throat, "Good night, darling."

will happen after the war emergency is over. Will it mean another depression worse than the last one? It is certainly possible unless the greatest possible foresight is used, beginning now. The recommendations of the TNEC are aimed, apparently, at this post-war period, rather than at the period of the defense effort, which is no time to rock boats.
Many and many a sub-study, and many a recommendation for new laws will come out of the vast body of what the TNEC has learned about our economy. Only the general lines are clear, but they are interesting as a questing searchlight beam, poked toward the future.
First, the committee is sold on free enterprise. It feels that the only way in which America will eventually be gotten back at peacetime work is by reopening the opportunities for new enterprise. Those avenues are now increasingly blocked on one hand by the increasing size of a few vast corporations, and by increasing government regulation.
Thus the committee suggests, subjecting national corporations to national charter and control; loosening the grip of patent rights; abolition of basing-point systems for calculating prices; repeal of the Miller-Tydings type of price-maintenance laws; government restriction of new restraints; legal and tax policies which will foster and protect new enterprises, and thus encourage them.
That is a bare hint of the line of thought that has come to the majority of the TNEC after hearing all this testimony. The crux of the matter is here: as long as American business continues to gravitate into larger and fewer units, an equal centralization and expansion of government is inevitable. As free enterprise is restricted, free government is endangered; political freedom is impossible without economic freedom.
When the present emergency is passed, it is clear that the United States is going to have to do some fast seeping. Every bit of light that can be thrown now on the best direction of those steps, light such as the TNEC report is now shedding, is a guarantee of future safety and progress.

A Stab of Light Into the Dim Future

A mere million dollars is nothing in the vortex of billions whirling about in Washington today. Yet the million dollars spent by the Temporary National Economic Committee during the past three years in getting together 20,000 pages of testimony from more than 500 industrial leaders may turn out to be the most productive million of them all.
The committee set itself a crushing task—nothing less than to find out the answers to the questions everyone has been asking for 10 years: Why want amid plenty? What's wrong with our economic system?
Now, in 37 volumes, the report is made. It should be the greatest mine of information that exists on our economy and how it works, and why it doesn't work.

Ethiopia's Capital Taken

Addis Ababa Surrendered by Italians Without a Shot

CAIRO, Egypt — (P) — The British announced Sunday that their troops had marched into Addis Ababa, capital from which Ethiopian warriors retired on May 5, 1936, to wage five years of guerrilla struggle for freedom from Italian invaders.

"Leading detachments of our imperial forces reached Addis Ababa Saturday evening," said a Middle East headquarters communique.

The victory, marking a rapid swing of 90 miles since Friday when the Awash river was crossed east of the capital, was not yet interpreted by military observers as meaning that Benito Mussolini's entire East African empire had crumbled, however. It was believed the British entered the capital without resistance after the Italian garrison had fled north.

"Italy probably has 70,000 troops scattered in the mountains and deserts of east and they may attempt guerrilla warfare, or make a stand somewhere between the capital and Addis Ababa to the north. But the force is broken and rapidly melting away through desertion from the 100,000 it once totaled, the British said.

"A great battle apparently was shaping up in North Africa, east of Benghazi, which the British have abandoned to Axis forces. The British said "the concentration of our troops is proceeding smoothly" in that sector.

Athens had its second air raid alarm since Sunday morning and thousands stood in the streets to watch a German plane race over amid bursts of anti-aircraft fire. No bombs fell.

Many German Dead

A government spokesman said bodies of Nazi dead were piled high before Greek positions after the German Palm Sunday invasion from Bulgaria.

Saving air battles over the fighting ground troops Monday cost the Germans at least 11 planes, it was stated officially. Several others were declared damaged.

An Athens paper said an irregular band of Bulgarians joined in the battle Monday morning against Greek forces in the mountains but was captured.

The high command said the Greek positions were defended only by "very small Greek forces" and a spokesman declared:

"We are fighting against forces 10 times superior, against mechanical implements 100 times greater, but our soldiers are holding fast even though German airplanes rage over their heads."

Nazis Gain on Slavs

BERLIN — (P) — Yugoslavia's whole transport and communication system has been "fatally" disrupted by the swift blows of the Luftwaffe, DNE, official German news agency, said Monday.

Beyond stating the German army was already about 18 to 25 miles on Yugoslav soil, the Germans stuck to brief high command communiqués issued from time to time.

"On the southeast front the attack is proceeding on schedule against stubborn resistance," the war bulletin said.

Hide, Seek in Mine Laying

Writer Tastes Peril of Trip Off English Coast

By PAUL MANNING

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

SOMEWHERE OFF THE ENGLISH COAST — In thirty minutes it will be zero hour. Up on the bridge the captain of this mine layer is trying to steer a course through mine fields, laid two nights before.

In thirty minutes he will be over the spot where operations are to take place this night.

It is dark, and as you stand pressed close to the unrailed stern, with six of the seventy men and five officers who make up the crew of this boat, you feel tension in the air. If that navigator up on the bridge, taking bearings from a fixed sea mark by the aid of a gear wire, makes a miscalculation, this bobbing boat will be no more.

The fifty-year-old seaman next to me says, "If anything touches us now, we won't have time for a deep breath."

For stretching back from the stern into a long, dark cavern is death, in four even rows—two on the starboard side, two on the port side.

Each mine weighs one half ton. Early in the afternoon on shore, at the depot, they had loaded these mines. They had mixed what looked like oatmeal, which was T. N. T., with ammonium nitrate, and as the mixture was poured into the hollow drum it had the appearance of golden honey.

Then, only one hour before, the angular Welshman they call the gunner had passed down between these rows, adjusting the primer and the detonator which turned this golden honey into a deadly explosive. Occasionally he would stop and slap the side of one mine, just missing those wicked looking hours and say, "This one's for old 'nasty' 'imself'."

Then another seaman, along the stern, said everytime they approached the zero hour it reminded him of the trip they made three weeks ago. That was when they mined a large harbor on the German-French coast. The Germans knew they were there, but were afraid to send out E-boats because their mine sweepers were up the coast.

So they tried sweeping the harbor with searchlights from the shore, so land batteries could draw a bead on the little British boat. It was a game of hide and seek, this sailor said, trying to dodge the stabbing fingers of light which swept in circling arcs over the whole area. Sometimes one would fasten on the boat, but the captain would quickly change course and lose the light. Twenty minutes of this dodging, which seemed a lifetime as the shells kept coming closer, and the job was done. The thirty minutes were up now. The captain flashed a shaded light

Army Day at Camp Robinson

Celebrated at Four Southern Camps on Sunday

By the Associated Press

Army Day was observed Sunday at four Southern military posts with exercises appropriate to the Sabbath holiday. Numerous cities planned parades and other celebrations Monday.

Some sections of the nation commemorated the occasion Saturday because Army Day, being April 6, fell on Sunday this year, and President Roosevelt issued a statement Saturday signalling the event. Some Southern cities and military centers chose to wait until Monday for their celebrations.

Ceremonies Sunday were held at Camp Blanding, Fla., Camp Robinson, Ark., Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. Approximately 5,000 civilians joined with the nearly 35,000 New England and Southern soldiers at Blanding in flag-raising exercises.

Gov. Spessard L. Holland of Florida and Maj. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, commander of the Fourth Army Corps, addressed the gathering—the first time all the troops in the camp had assembled together.

Governor Holland said training of New England men and Southern men together there was a "splendid illustration" of what happens when the nation unites in a national crisis. The flag was the gift of Mrs. Frederick Bliss of Hartford, Ct.
